JUDGE COLLINS/MUNICIPAL COURT CHECK-IN

Judge Collins spoke to the Board about the municipal court process. The key points made were:

- Juveniles are very important to the judge. Because of YouthZone, juveniles are treated similarly in Basalt, Carbondale, Glenwood Springs, New Castle, Silt, and Rifle. If the juvenile takes accountability for their actions YouthZone performs an assessment and if the juvenile fulfills their contract their case is dismissed
- The court does not assign community service however, it offers self-reporting (the offender can volunteer to do community service)
- A juvenile offender with no prior record can partake in restorative justice (face to face with the victim)
- The court does not have a target revenue stream – the judge acts independently

CREATIVE DISTRICT (CD) UPDATE

Creative District Executive Director Amy Kimberley was present at the meeting.

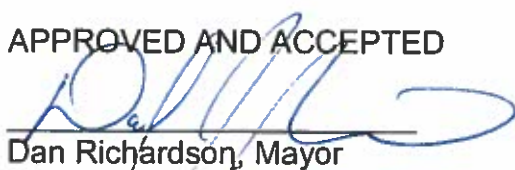

Amy gave an update on the Creative District. The key points made were:

- The CD needs to find a way to be sustainable in 2019
- They are about to launch an archway at Derail Park; it's the collaboration of many people and it is the gateway to the town
- They have been successful at finding generous donors
- They received $45,000 for a mural project
- Space to Create Housing – Amy and Trustee Bohmfalk met with Jeff Gatlin of the Roaring Fork School District to discuss the possibility of using some of the District's land for Space to Create housing – Jeff did not dismiss the idea
- An information station will be installed in March
- The gateway to Carbondale Highway 133/Highway 82 project is slow moving because they don't have any financing
- The school district hired a project manager to connect the three Carbondale public schools through an artistic path
- The Town has not participated in the Creative District process on purpose – other Creative Districts who have a partnership with their town are trying to separate
